8. RELATIONS OF TIM WITH THIRD PARTIES

In carrying out its business activities, TIM has different types of relationships with third parties which may entail risks of non-compliance with anti-corruption regulations.

Certain types of relationships with Third Parties pose higher risk of corruption. Such risk may derive from:

8.1 Significant Relations

TIM has identified the following types of relations that entail risks of corruption:

- Relations with the PA: such interactions specifically concern relations in which the PA act as client, for the obtainment of administrative or judicial orders, for the execution of controls and inspections, for the fulfillment of obligations or the granting of loans.

- Relations with customers and suppliers: such interactions relate to the Company's entire business cycle and are exposed to the risk of both active and passive corruption.
- Relations with other private entities: relations with any private entities that carry out institutional, professional or business activities (such as rating agencies, financing entities providing funds to projects in which TIM is involved, or companies participating in temporary association of enterprises or consortia), in which TIM may have an interest that may result in benefits or disadvantages to TIM.

Significant Relations do not include relations with individual customers having a relationship with the Company as final users of the services/products provided by TIM.

With regard to the Significant Relations, and in addition to what provided in the foregoing sections, Principles of Conduct and Relations of TIM with Third Parties, TIM has established the following rules:

8.2 Significant Third Parties

Third Parties that have business dealings with TIM include certain specific categories in relation to which the Company has identified greater than low risk of corruption on the basis of the characteristics and activities of that party.

On the basis of the type of activities that are the object of the Company's business relations with Third Parties and the type of such relations, TIM has identified the following Significant Third Parties:

- managers and other employees of the Company who represent or act on behalf of TIM with reference to activities or relations with third parties who are at risk of Corruption;
- managers and other employees of the Company who are responsible for decision-making functions in processes that are at risk of Corruption.

The criteria and procedures for the identification and the related aspects for the management of corporate personnel in a Significant Position, as well as the monitoring activities envisaged, are governed by specific Guidelines.

TIM ensures that specific Anti-Corruption Due-Diligence activities are performed with respect to any relationship with a Significant Third Party and/or personnel in a Significant Position (section 9).

9. DUE-DILIGENCE

As a result of the assessment of corruption risk, TIM has identified a greater than low risk of corruption in relation to: (i) specific categories of transactions, projects or activities, (ii) actual or potential relations with Significant Third Parties or (iii) with specific categories of personnel (Significant Positions).

In order to help decision-making processes the Due Diligence activities conducted by TIM examine the extent and nature of the risks of corruption in relation to each of the above-mentioned categories. Such activities are described in specific procedures, that in particular provide for:

- a) escalating to the Compliance Department in the event of critical situations;
- b) risk mitigation actions (for example, contractual provisions).

Due Diligence activities are updated on a periodic basis according to the applicable procedure to adequately evaluate changes and new information, also in order to decide whether to include further categories at risk.

Generally, Due Diligence is designed to ascertain:

- the existence of a sound business reason for the transaction falling within the Sensitive Areas;

- the absence of any specific risk factors (Red Flags) in a relationship with a Significant Third Party or with personnel in a Significant Position.

Should the Due Diligence identify Red Flags that cannot be managed by the existing anti-corruption controls, the department responsible for the relationship, with the support of the Compliance Department, in order to mitigate the corruption risks identified shall:

- a) adopt appropriate safeguards to protect the Company, or measures to promptly suspend, interrupt or withdraw from the relationship, in case the relationship is in place;
- b) decide not to go ahead with the transaction or, if it considers necessary to proceed despite an assessment to the contrary by the Compliance Department, adopt appropriate safeguards to protect the Company before conclusion, in case of new relationship.

Due-Diligence on Significant Third Parties

In managing relations with a Significant Third Party, TIM guarantees that the following actions will be taken:

- in-depth checks on the Significant Third Party before starting a contractual relationship or carrying out any transaction with such Party (Anti-Corruption Due Diligence). To this purpose, it is implemented a process for validation of third party, during which the following circumstances are verified: (i) the reputation and reliability of such parties; (ii) the existence of any conflicts of interest, such as the presence of economic and financial interests in businesses of TIM competitors; (iii) potential undue influence in relations with the Public Administration; (iv) judicial proceedings for Corruption or criminal offences against the Public Administration pending or past, and (v) knowledge of and commitment to adopt anti-corruption measures and adequate anti-corruption policies and procedures;
- monitoring the fulfillment of the obligations of the Significant Third Party to comply with the Anti-corruption Laws, as well as to comply with the Code of Ethics and Conduct, the 231 Organizational Model, the Principles of Conduct and the Anti-corruption Policy, by means of contractual clauses, that are addressed also to sub-suppliers and other similar figures, that provide for specific representations and warranties, and obligation to make new representations and warranties in the event of any change in the represented and warranted situation;
- refresh and review of the Due Diligence in case of renewal of the agreement.

Due Diligence on Significant Positions

TIM ensures that the following activities are carried out in respect of the personnel in a Significant Position:

- carrying out a Due Diligence check with reference to personnel who hold or are designed to hold a position identified as a Significant Position according to the Internal Guidelines (Management of Significant Positions). The check regards, among the other, the following aspects: (i) the reputation and reliability of such personnel; (ii) the existence of any conflicts of interest such as the presence of economic or financial interests in the activities of Third Parties; (iii) relations with the Public Administration; (iv) the position in the organization structure and the assignment of powers of attorney/proxies; (v) participation in training initiatives on anti-corruption matters, 231 Organisational Model and Code of Ethics and Conduct.
